CROPS THAT ARE MOST PROMISING.

The past season brought the smallest crop results in ten years, but increasing his production of there is promise that the coming year in the history of the country.

The government crop forecast of yesterday shows the winter wheat area to have increased nearly three by feeding to sheep, hogs, and catmillion acres and the condition of the crop is the bighest in ten years

Kansas is about to recover from the setback of this year. The wheat cows must compete with. acreage is by far the greatest ever of the crop is excellent

By spring, with tariff and currency egislation out of the way, and crops most promising, the country should begin to see the bright side of things.

DRY FARM WHEAT IN UTAH.

The dry farm station at Nephi, of the Utah Agricultural college, has been experimenting with many varieties of winter wheat, with the result that the red group has proved nost satisfactory

While the average yield of the soft variety was 15 bushels, that of the Turkey variety" was 17 to 23 bush-

The average bushel weight of the dry farm winter wheat was 61.4 pounds or 1.4 pounds above the stan-

This indicates that the Utah red wheat produced on our dry farms is superior in quality to that of the average wheat of the United States and the yield is much higher than that of the wheat grown in the great wheat states. This offers the promise that some day hundreds of thousands of acres of land in Utah, now unocupled and looked upon as worthless, will be producing wheat.

BUTTER FROM NEW ZEALAND HOLDS ATTENTION

Writing from Salt Lake City to the Standard, W. F. Jensen, president of the Jensen Creamery company, comments on an editorial on New Zealand butter which appeared in this paper last Saturday and offers an explanation as to why Utah is slipping backward in butter production.

The letter follows:

"Editor Standard: In your paper of Saturday, December 13, I note an editorial on 'New Zealand Butter on Ogden Tables.' The editorial is very and contains good common sense. However, I doubt very much that to the present time any New Zeaiand butter has been sold in Og-At least, my company, the Jen sen Creamery company, has not sold a pound anywhere up to the present time and we will not handle any so

In fact, I believe it will have cheese, and meat products. The low ering of the tariffs, and in some in stances the complete withdrawal of all duty, will enable dealers to bring times of scarcity when the native product is not sufficient to go around, and when, consequently, tion contests, we recall the long edl- normal high prices would prevail. cost of production, or reduce the price as a general thing in any apeffect of keeping prices from going abnormally high during three periods of the year when there is a scarcity The production of dairy products not on the increase in this state

It has been at a standstill now for some two or three years. This is caused by the rather common qual ity possessed by the live stock in this state. For instance, we have too many cows that only produce 150 or perhaps 175 pounds of butter per annum, while a cow bred up for the special purpose of producing milk should easily produce 300 to 400 FOOD IS STOLEN pounds of butter per annum on the tame amount of feed and with the same expenditure of labor. The farmer that has the good kind of cows is products right along, but the farmer, the possesses the rather producing a small quantity of butter per annum, cannot figure where he is securing any more or as much for his grain, his hay, and other feed than he can secure because the high prices of all kinds of meat products places a certain value on all kinds of feed which in return the farmer that feeds milk

The permanent cure of the high sown in that state and the condition cost of food products is bound to come through better methods and better livestock and a consequent increase in production with no increase in the cost of production, and the sooner we all realize this the sooner we will approach the time when there may be some abatement in food prices.

"W. J. JENSEN." (Signed) We are reliably informed that the New Zealand product has reached Utah, is being sold and the consumers have had no complaints to offer

The object of the Standard in calling attention to the importation of this foreign butter is to sound a note of warning to our dairy people. The farmers of Utah depending on miles cows and a butter market must begin to reckon with a new competitor. They must do as Mr. Jensen suggests, improve the grade of their cows or finally be driven out of the business. There is no good reason why a farmer should keep a cow on his place that yields only one-half to one-third as much butter fat as an animal bred up for that purpose, and yet we are informed that, up to a few years ago, not one farmer in one hundred in this state knew the yield in butter of any one of his cows, no record being kept on that most important matter.

The milch cows of the past were from the common run of range cattle, but of late Jerseys and other improved grades have been introduced. But the transformation has been slow and not in keeping with the demands of the business.

THEATERS Annex

When Arch Selwyn , the young manager of the American Play company, produced Bayard Veiler's drama "Within the Law," it was truly a stroke of fortune and, in the two years or more that it has been running, has placed him in the ranks of the prominent theatrical managers of America. And when Manager Jo-seph Goss of the Orpheum theater broked the play, it was a stroke of good fortune for Ogden play-goers, for two large audiences sat yesterday afternoon and last night and watched the unfolding of its dramatc scenes with an interest so intense at times that it would not admit of applause. The drama deals with a subject of ive interest in these days of public-ty, when large employers of labor are being brought into the limelight

Mary Turner, a shop girl, has been accused of theft and railroaded to all, through the efforts of her employer, that her fate might be an example to the other employes. In an interview with the men, while mancled to the wrist of an officer, she tells him that she will get even for the injustice after she has been liberated. She does so by allying her-selt with a band of crooks, who are aided by a lawyer, and, in their tricks to obtain money, keep "within the law." She becomes wealthy, gets acquainted with the merchant's son, who falls in love with her. She dramatic scene in the second act, when the merchant, who has been trying to break up the affair between her and his son, tells him that he sent her to prison and for her name gave her a number, but that she was ven now for she had taken his name. The efforts of the police to capture Mary and the gang after the marriage and to assist the merchant to break the ties of wedlock, occupy he time, in the third and fourth act and include some grippling views of collee methods of hounding and applying the "third degree" and of the methods of operation of high class crooks. The balking of these efforts by Mary and her associates, during the last three acts, brings to light many of the crimes that can be com-mitted "within the law" if the criminal has wealth enough to manipu-

The keynote of the play is struck says, to the merchant in answer to the statement she was convicted by court of justice, call them courts of justice any more, but courts of law.

Margaret Illington, the star, is a beautiful woman and ranks high among the emotional actresses of the present day. That she has earned her position, she made manifest teams were almost evenly matched to the Ogden theater-goers yesterday Her power to control the different ing emotions, was a revelation.
